

The FCC needs to seriously consider the damage to the concept of "competition" that will result from the further loosening of Broadcast Ownership rules. Allowing a few companies to own large chunks of the communication spectrum in the name of "realizing the efficiencies of common ownership" is at odds with an "ongoing concern for diversity and competition in broadcast markets". By restricting the number of media outlets any company can own, you end up with severe lack of diversity and endanger the very outlets of free speech our country was based on.

Please re-tighten the Broadcast Ownership rules, not loosen them.
